Information Protection in Content-centric Networks
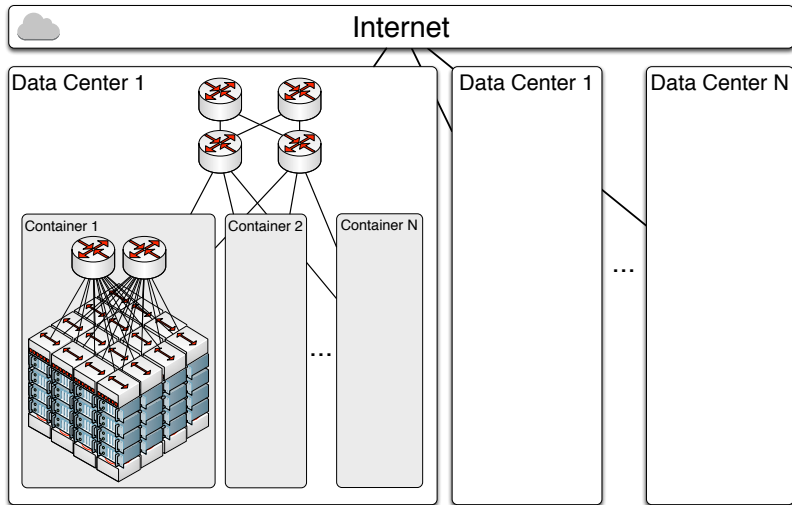

Christopher C. Lamb

Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering
University of New Mexico
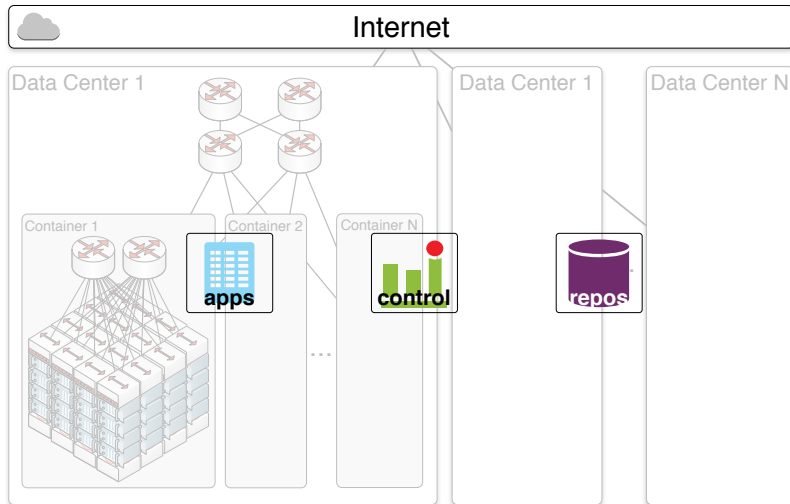

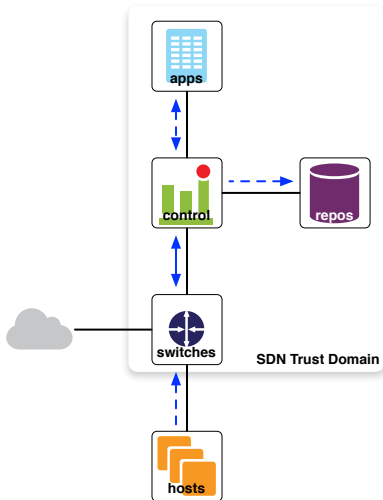

November 6, 2012

THE UNIVERSITY of
NEW MEXICO

Networks in the Bad Old Days

THE UNIVERSITY of
NEW MEXICO

The Brave New World!

Brave New Implications

Unintended Results of SDN

Moving to centralized management has profound implications.

- Trust loci provides greater spoofing opportunities
- Smaller number of involved systems refines target space
- Trust concentration leads to larger attack surface
- Single compromise can have outsized effects

THE UNIVERSITY of
NEW MEXICO

Brave New Implications

Unintended Results of SDN

Moving to centralized management has profound implications.

- Trust loci provides greater spoofing opportunities
- Smaller number of involved systems refines target space
- Trust concentration leads to larger attack surface
- Single compromise can have outsized effects

THE UNIVERSITY of
NEW MEXICO

host ⟷ switch

- 1
- 2

THE UNIVERSITY of NEW MEXICO

switch $\Longleftrightarrow$ controller

- 1
- 2

controller ⟺ repository

- 1
- 2

controller ⟺ application

- 1
- 2

Questions? Comments?